Students often encounter emotional challenges during their academic career, and may or may not know how to seek help. As an administrator, faculty, or staff member interacting with students, you are in a prime role to guide students to the services they need. The purpose of Counseling and Mental Health Services (CAMHS), a unit of Harvard University Health Services, is to serve students throughout their college career, not only when they are “in crisis.” Additionally, CAMHS is available to support and consult with you in your identification and referral of students.

How you can help

You are not expected to take on the role of a trained counselor!

- Essays or papers that have themes of despair, social isolation, rage
- Sustained lack of engagement, avoiding or dominating discussions

- Marked changes in dress, hygiene, or weight
- Insomnia or excessive sleep
- Highly disruptive behaviors (e.g., agitation, withdrawal, lack of apparent emotion)

- Long, incomprehensible and/or grandiose electronic communications

OTHER MAJOR TRAUMAS
- Death or severe illness of a family member, or the break-up of a relationship

Engage the student

1. Talk to the student in person and share your concerns
2. Listen patiently, withhold judgment
3. Anticipate the student’s concerns and fears about seeking counseling

You don’t have to do it alone. CAMHS is here to support you.

If you are unsure about how to handle a specific situation with a student, please call a CAMHS urgent care clinician.
